

Google Hangouts becomes Google Meet

8/29/17

BY HEIDI OLSON

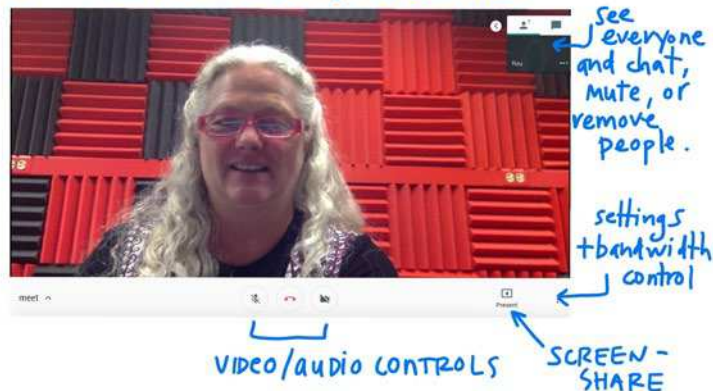

In the next few weeks, some faculty may notice a switch from “Google Hangouts” to something called “Google Meet”. The two are nearly identical but the change in interface might be a little confusing, so we’ve summarized some of the changes to help you stay ahead of the game.

- up to 25 simultaneous users
- invite students through a meeting code which you can reuse
 - get meeting code through a calendar event
 - get meeting code directly at meet.google.com
- currently only works in Chrome; other browser compatibility is in the works
- moderator needs to have a Google account to log in; users do not need a Google account (@alaska.edu or commercial gmail account)
- there is NO option to call the meeting with a phone unless you use the Google smartphone Hangouts Meet app

TWO SCREENSHOTS OF NEW INTERFACE

THE NEW MEET (HANGOUTS) INTERFACE

LEARN MORE

Get started with Hangouts Meet: <https://gsuite.google.com/learning-center/products/hangouts/get-started-meet/>